

Morning sharing 18th November, 2014

5D Ken Chung

Good morning Principal, teachers and my fellows. I'm Ken Chung from 5D.

Do you know which city's citizens are the most honest?

Reader's Digest performed a wallet test in 19 cities. They dropped 192 wallets near parks, shopping malls, and on sidewalks and counted how many were given back.

Finnish capital city Helsinki returned 11 of its wallets. Mumbai in India scored second-best in the city, while in Lisbon, Portugal, only one of the wallets was returned.

It is inspiring to see that there are so many honest people in the world. Honesty is valued among all people no matter they are young or old, poor or rich. I will report to teachers as fast as I can if I pick up a wallet. My parents and teachers always teach me the importance of honest. Being honest means not to lie, steal, cheat, or deceive in any way. It is essential for our future career. It can also build our strength of character and get peace of mind.

Besides, I know how it feels when something is lost. Once I lost an entire bag at a sports ground, luckily I got everything back. The feeling of panic and confused is terrible.

If you find an abandoned wallet, will you give it back?

Thank you for attention.