

Feature

Sports p.22

Garden of Remembrance
A14

The Blue Blood Campus

All Write

Issue No.6
Autumn 2011

Fung Kai Liu Man Shek Tong Secondary School

see updates at www.fklmstss.edu.hk

Fabulous Performance at Liu Man Shek Tong

Elia Lai

The Spring Onion Band came to our school and cast their spell to bring students on an exciting musical journey through half a century. They performed emotionally stirring and exhilarating songs based on yesteryear, performing live music from the Beatles, Michael Jackson, Bon Jovi and Lady Gaga. The students experienced the magic and delight of the masterpieces.

The show was greatly admired by our students especially the singers' passion and the perfect co-operation among the band members. Their humorous dialogue and fascinating music coupled with magnificent voices, showed their enthusiasm for music. That was why the senior students enjoyed their performance so much.

Watching the fabulous 'History of Rock n Roll', students had an unforgettable experience and hope we will have a great show next year too.

“Row row row your boat, gently down the hall.....”

Kobe Lee

Fung Kai Liu Man Shek Tong Secondary School held a rather unique rowing competition on May 20th 2011. Instead of rowing our boats down a stream, as the nursery rhyme recounts, we “rowed” them in our school hall!

All competitors were placed into three groups, and they competed against each other in these groups.

The most competitive group by far was the one made up of Form 3 classes. I was impressed by their classmates who held a hand-made banner to cheer on their peers, and encouraged their “warriors” during the competition. It made the atmosphere more electric.

The oar-passing part also got us excited because if you passed the oar to the next rower late, the other teams would take the lead, and your score would plummet.

The final 10 seconds of the competition almost took our breath away, partly because of the physical exertion involved and partly because of the anxiety associated with competing against others. During the last 10 seconds, every participant was struggling to row as fast as they could. Instead of roaring for their ‘warriors’, their classmates were standing outside the hall watching the action on the big screen. Finally, the referee blew her whistle and class 3B was pronounced the winner.

Although the other classes did not win, they developed team spirit and friendship. In the end, that's what really counts.

We will save the world!

Lam Yi Man

“Look! Mr. Incredibles.”

“See! Doraemon and Popeye are also coming!”

Last week was the English Festival in our school. There were many activities organised by students and teachers. We could find many photos and posters showing characters from the movies everywhere, such as Fantastic Four, Superman and so on. All of the activities were conveying the message of saving the world. The game booths impressed me a lot.

It was held at lunch time in the school hall. There were six counters organised by Form 4 students. Students could play games and collect stamps to win the prizes. The funniest one was called Organ Donors. The participant needed to use a hook to fish the ‘organs’ which were made of polystyrene and to name them in English like ‘kidney’, ‘liver’, etc. Students could learn English terms of these human organs. There was another game

CONTINUED ON P.28

Looking for a job?

Cheung Yin Ting

Last Friday (27th May 2011), the Student Union organized an activity – a game usually played in university.

How is it played? Read on....

In a nutshell, there are different kinds of jobs, and you need to make important career-related choices.

First, you need to study in secondary school, and then have an examination, just like the HKDSE in the real world. Then, if your examination results are sufficient to meet the minimum entry requirements of the university, you can choose to study continuously or to work in society. If you choose the latter, you need to choose the jobs you want to do. But, just like the real world, you cannot be a lawyer if you are not a graduate.

This game allows us to gain an insight into the requirements and demands of a variety of jobs, and also to gain an appreciation of the importance of education.

I guess the main message of the game is that we need to be determined and focussed in our studies, so that we can achieve our career-related dreams. Sounds logical to me!

An interview with Sonic Chu Chu-wa (朱柱華)

Editorial Group

Date: 7 July 2011 Time: 10:00 am

Venue: Funland

Sonic Chu Chu Wa is one of our F.7 graduates this year. Sonic has long been interested in magic, and in June, he surprised everybody by performing on the popular TV show ‘The Magic Ring’ (魔法擂台), showing his talent in front of millions of viewers. Our student reporters talk to Sonic about his exciting experience, and they endeavour to find out what happened behind the scenes.

Profile:

Name: Sonic Chu Chu-wa

Years of practising magic: 4

His favourite magician: Mirko Callaci (renowned Italian magician living in Spain)

Tips for people who like magic: Don't forget the purpose of learning magic. Always respect other magicians. Don't be arrogant or become big-headed.

CONTINUED ON P.35

89

The score awarded to a group of F.3 and F.4 students for first place at the 62nd Speech Festival

86

The score awarded to a group of F.1 and F.2 students for first place at the 62nd Speech Festival

Language Arts Alive

